

Laws, Rules

“Be perfect, therefore, as your heavenly Father is perfect.

– Christ

Laws

What is a law?

Law

A condition that cannot be changed.

Darkness always gives way to the light. Can darkness overcome the light?

You reap what you sow. Can you practice carpentry and finally become a doctor instead?

What comes out of your mouth, either builds or defiles you. Can you speak vulgar and still have your spirit grow?

Laws

- Laws cannot be broken.
- Attempting to break the law will only lead to disastrous and undesirable consequences.
- This is because laws are woven into the very fabric of creation itself.
- Before God creates, he first decides what laws his creation will be governed by.

Laws

- Laws are made by God, man only makes rules.
- When darkness gives way to the light, it is merely obeying its laws.
- When a tree produces fruits of its kind, it is obeying its laws.
- When a man dies spiritually because of his vulgar utterances, or grows spiritually because he speaks life, he fulfills the law of God.

And because laws cannot be broken, creation is held in place throughout the ages, and behaves as expected.

Humans, having knowledge of the law, can then apply them to produce magnificent things.

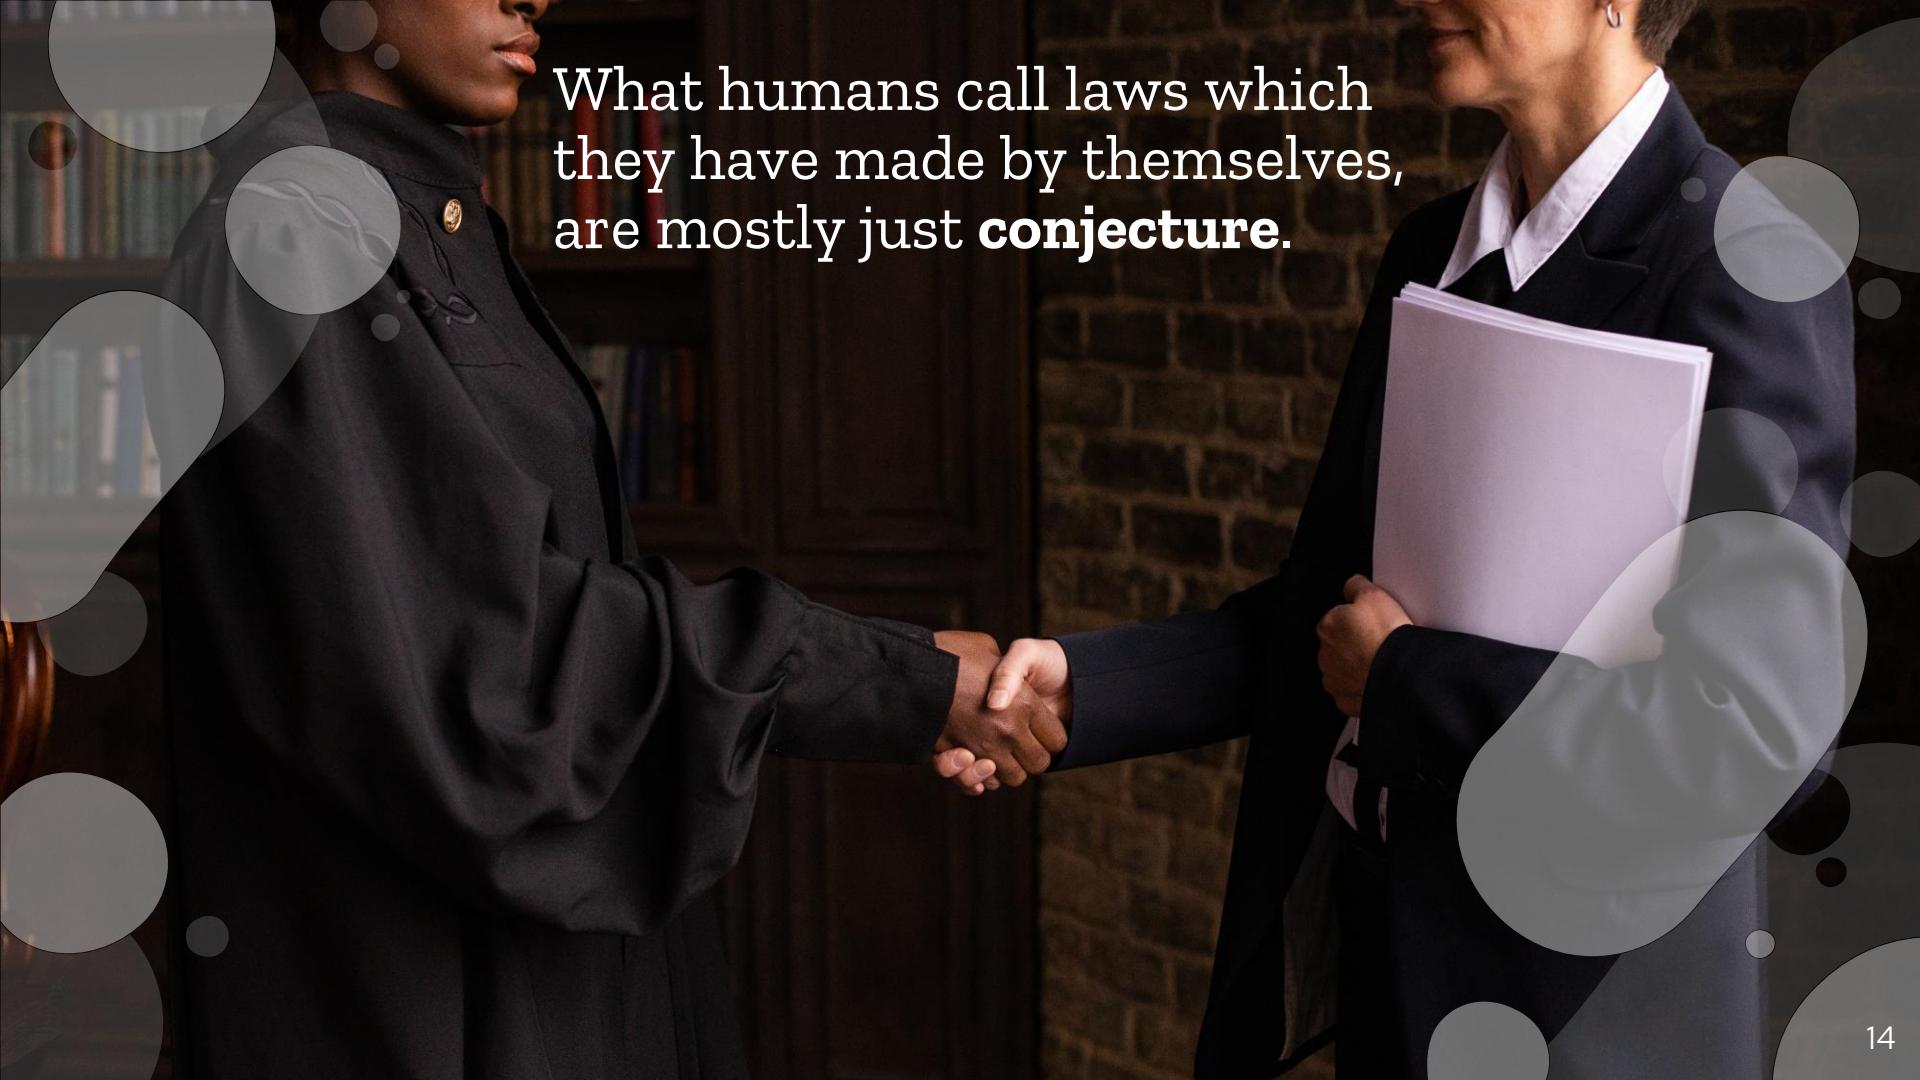

Because laws cannot be broken, they can be relied upon to produce the same results always.

When men appear to do the impossible, they are merely applying the laws correctly.

A photograph showing two individuals from the chest up, wearing dark-colored business suits. They are facing each other and shaking hands. The person on the right is also holding a light-colored folder or document. The background is dark and out of focus, suggesting an indoor setting like a library or office. Large, semi-transparent gray circles of varying sizes are overlaid on the image, creating a modern, graphic feel.

What humans call laws which they have made by themselves, are mostly just conjecture.

2

Laws II

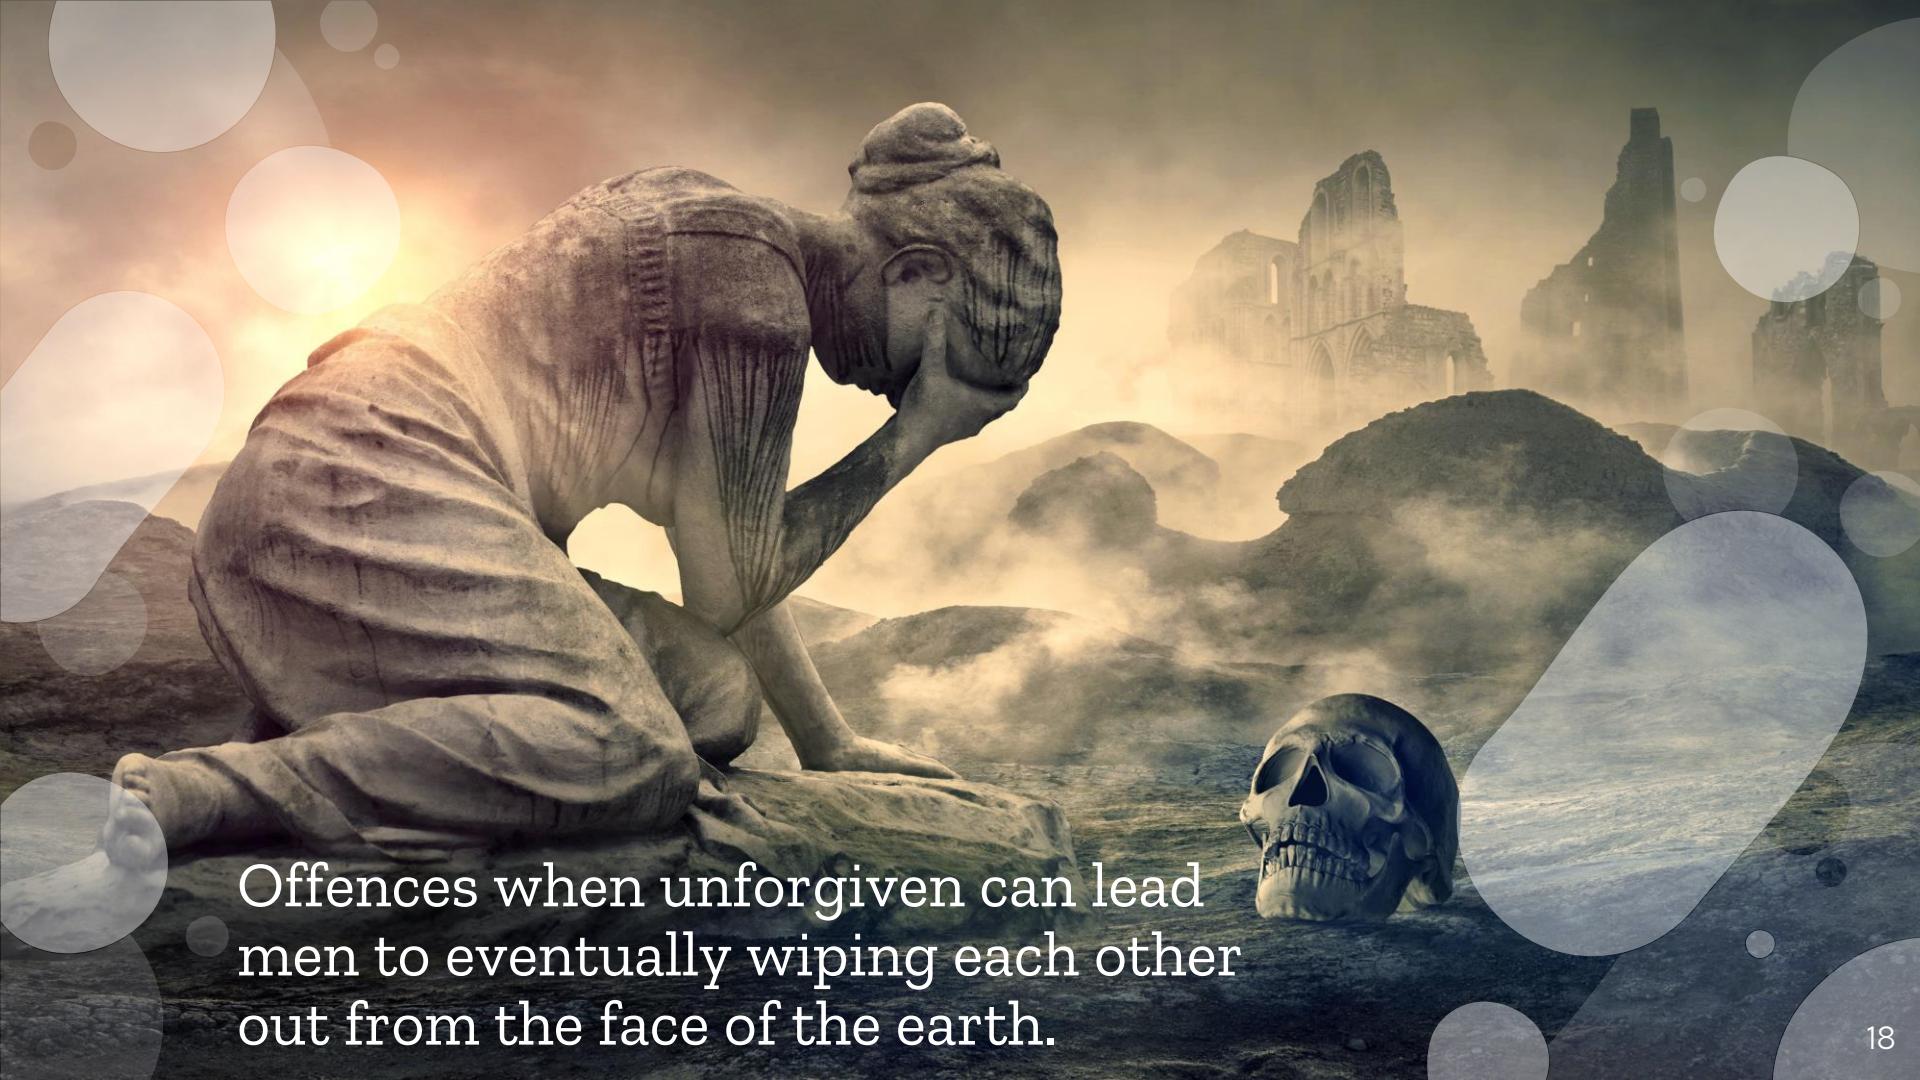

Why make laws?

Laws II

- Laws are not made for the sole purpose of being obeyed.
- Laws are made out of necessity.

Because humans are imperfect,
they are bound to offend each other.

Offences when unforgiven can lead men to eventually wiping each other out from the face of the earth.

Forgiveness therefore becomes a necessary law by which man must live.

3

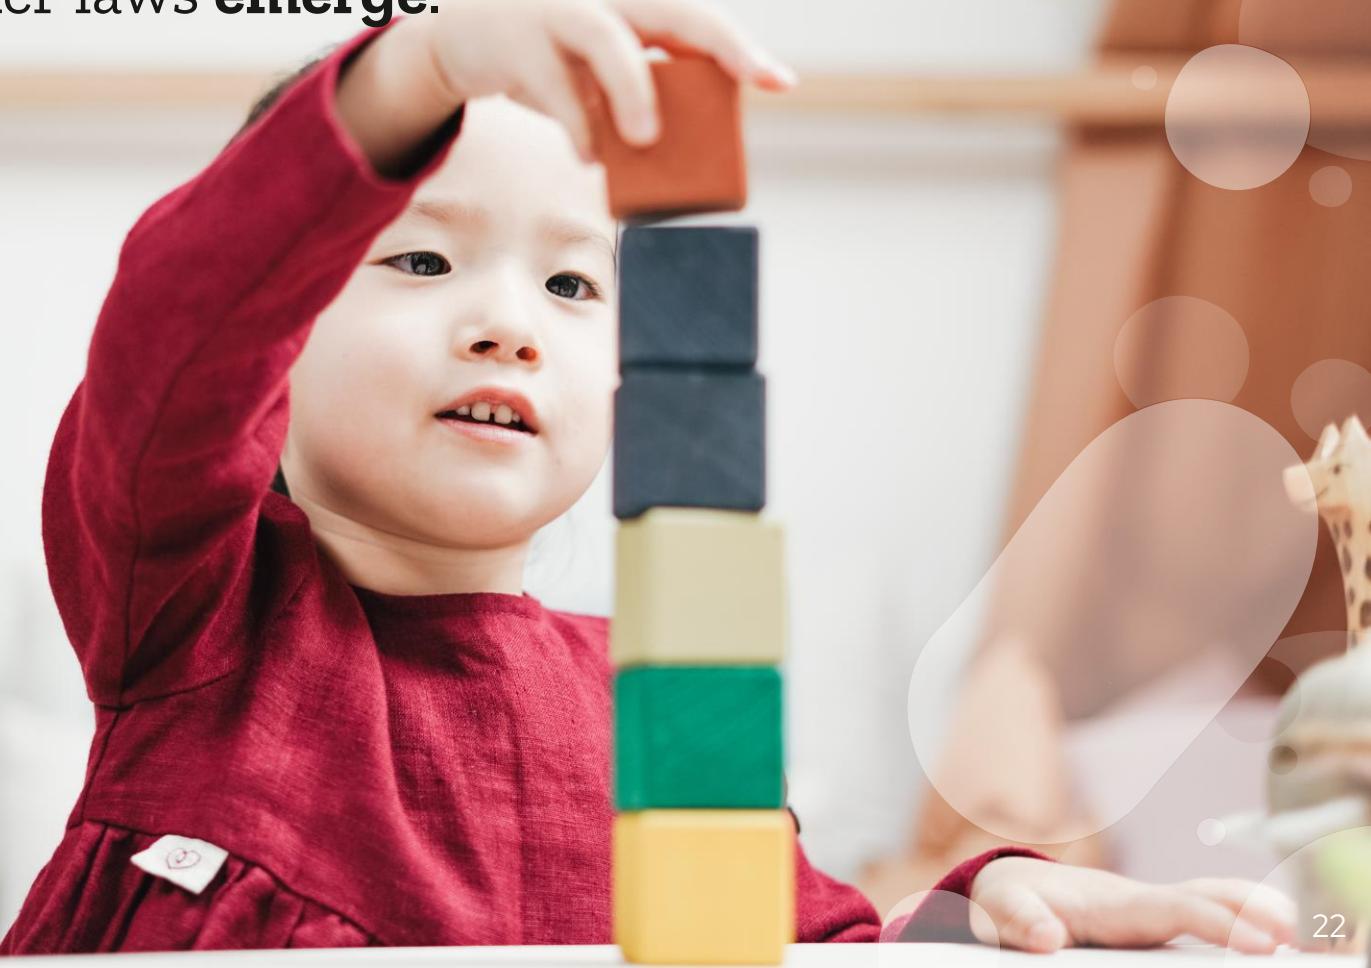

Laws III

Types of laws

Laws III

- Laws can be divided into 2 parts and ordered based on their level of application:
 1. Fundamental laws
 2. Higher laws based on fundamental laws
- Think of fundamental laws as laws which can exist on their own.
- Think of higher laws as laws that emerge out of fundamental laws, and cannot exist on their own.

When fundamental laws are applied, higher laws emerge.

Fundamental law: Man must begin life as an imperfect being and rise to attain perfection.

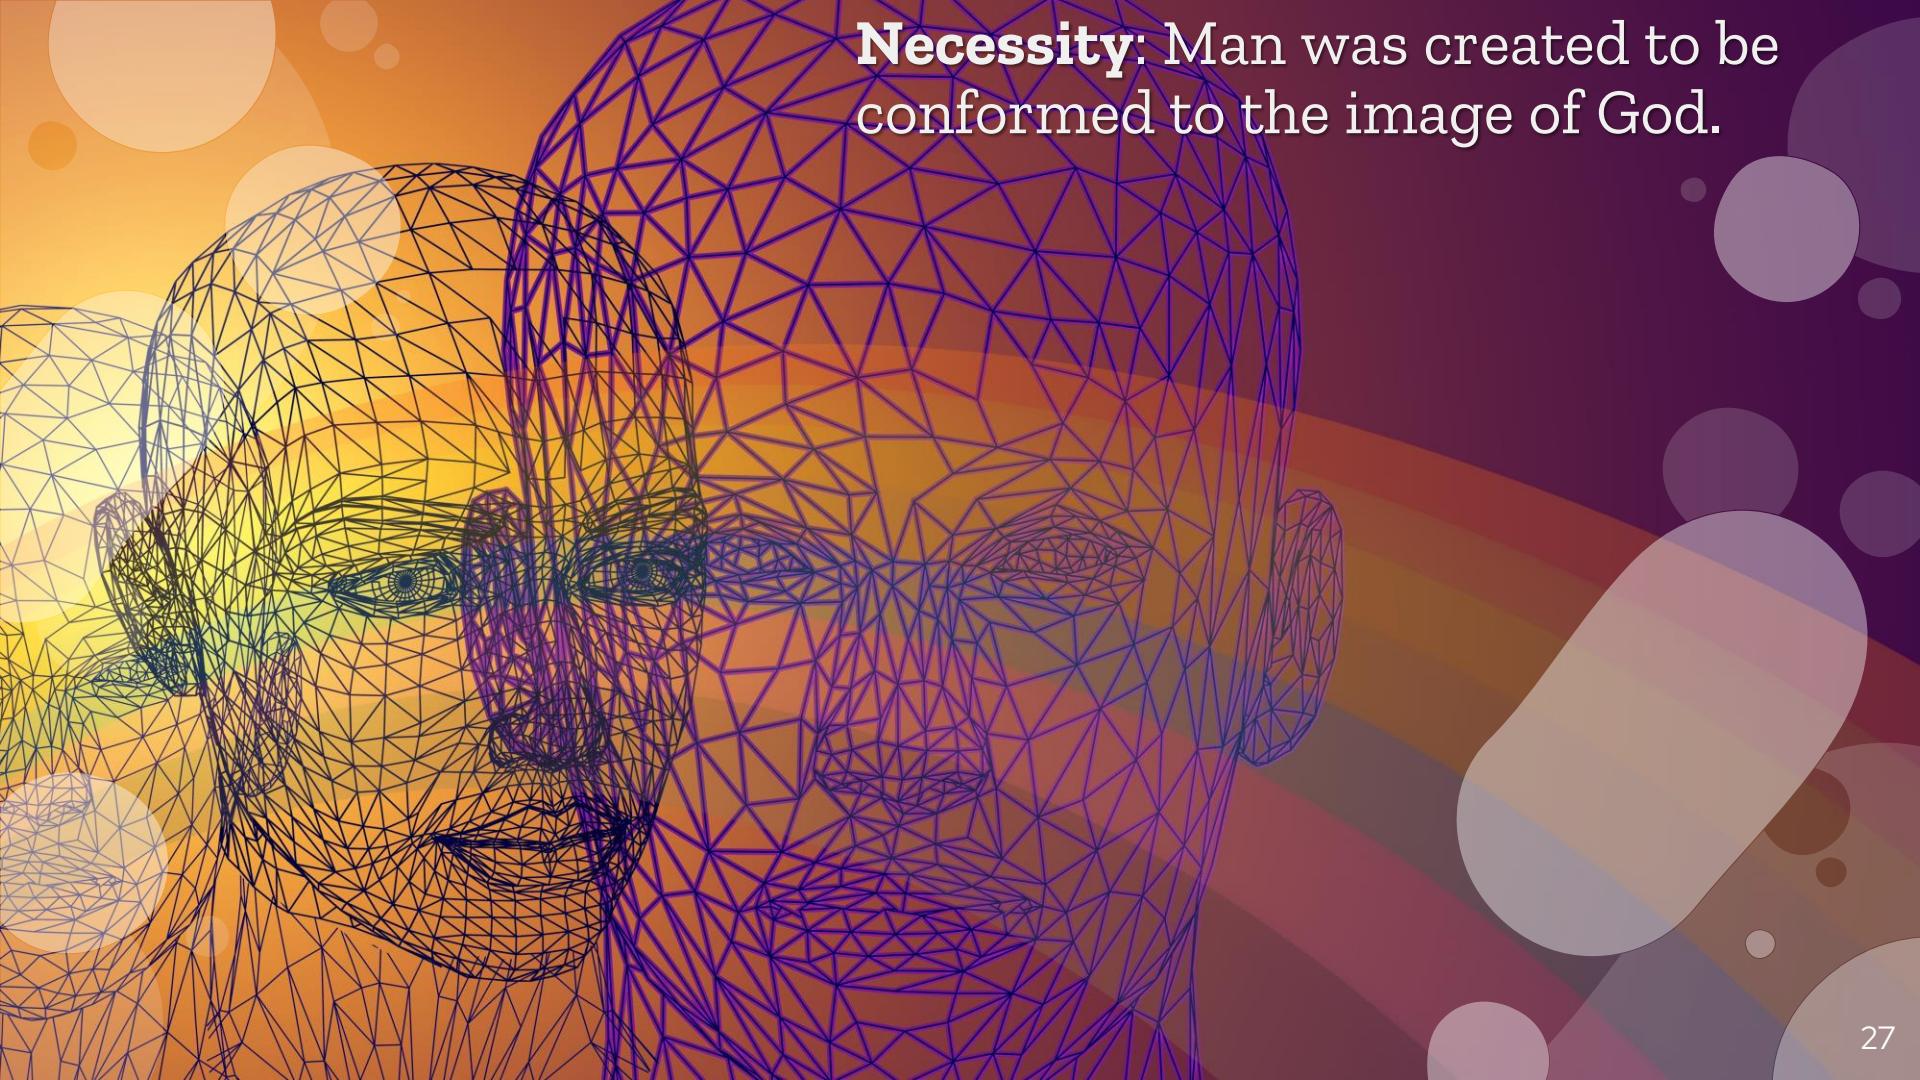

Necessity: Giving power to an untrained mind produces undesired results. Can any good come out of putting a baby in the driver's seat?

Higher law: Due to his imperfection he must dwell in time so that he does not grow up in an instant and destroy himself.

Fundamental law: Man cannot see God in his current state and live. In order to see God, man must become like God.

The background features two stylized, wireframe-like human heads in profile, facing left. The head on the left is rendered in blue and green, while the one on the right is in purple and orange. They are set against a vibrant, abstract backdrop of overlapping circles in shades of yellow, orange, red, and purple.

Necessity: Man was created to be conformed to the image of God.

Higher law: Man requires faith to keep him going, on his journey towards God, until he finally attains God.

Laws III

- When laws are not applied correctly, they can lead to certain unexpected results.
- This usually happens because man has a limited mind, and limited insight.
- That is why a man must be trained in the knowledge of the law in order to obtain the desired results.

Laws III

- A person who is ignorant of the laws of nature, is not likely to practice good hygiene.
- Such a person will always find themselves sick and will most likely live a short life.
- However, the laws of nature when studied carefully and applied correctly can benefit man immensely.

Laws III

- Identify 3 laws around you.
- State how applying these laws correctly can lead to desired consequences.

Rules

What are rules?

Rule

A condition that must be met in order to achieve a desired result. A rule can be broken.

Rules

- Rules can be broken.
- A rule is said to be broken when the desired results are achieved without following the rules.
- Just because a rule can be broken does not mean that it should.
- Sometimes following the rules can be the difference between life and death.

If humans are to be able to use vehicles safely, they must follow traffic rules.

Rules

- The desired result is that humans are able to use vehicles safely.
- The conditions that must be met before this can happen are the traffic rules.
- This does not mean that humans cannot break traffic rules, in other words, cross the red light and still manage to survive and not hurt anybody.

Rules

- Rules, like laws, are made out of necessity, and not merely to be followed.
- Rules are defined by a desired result or motive.
- The desired result is subject to change based on the human's level of insight or experience.
- What was desirable yesterday may no longer be desirable today.

When the desired result changes, the rules must also change to satisfy it.

Rules

- When the motive or desired result is clearly stated, hidden or unforeseen rules can be applied to satisfy it.
- It is required that the motive and desired result be stated at all times, before stating the rules.
- A person follows rules when they understand the importance of rules, and have been trained to value rules, and not because there is a penalty for going against them.

You will not set rules for goats because goats do not have it in them to follow rules.

Rules

- A child may have to learn to follow rules until they are advanced enough to understand the importance of the rules.
- To keep a child safe, wisdom requires that the child must be nudged in the right direction through other means and not solely based on reason.

A child follows the rules because of the love that they have for their guardians, because they do not wish to disappoint them, fear of the penalty, etc.

Rules

- For two people to be able to do business together they must set rules that they must agree to follow, for the business to succeed.
- You will surely not go into an agreement with a dishonest man who has no regard for rules.
- You are better off setting rules for sheep, rather than goats.

Rules

- Identify 3 rules around you and state their motives and desired result.
- State what will could go wrong if they are to be disobeyed.
- State your own desired result and state rules that must be followed in order to achieve your result.

5

Rules II

Illustration

Fundamental rule: You serve food in a student canteen. It is not desirable that students clamour for food, so you come up with a rule—all students must form a queue if they wish to be fed.

Necessity: You soon realize that some students have a medical condition which prevents them from standing for longer periods while they wait their turn.

Higher rule: You then come up with a rule that such students must jump the queue provided they present a report from the doctor.

Rules II

- What can go wrong with this rule?
- In what ways can this rule be broken?
- What can cause this rule to be changed?

6

Breaking rules

Rules can be broken, Laws cannot

God makes laws, man sets rules.

Breaking rules

- A law is said to be broken when the result is achieved without meeting the conditions.
- Attempting to break a law can only lead to disastrous and undesired results.
- This is because God considers all things before making a law.

Perfect knowledge is a requirement for creation.

Breaking rules

- Man, however, does not have perfect knowledge.
- When man wishes to arrive at a certain desirable result he comes up with rules which when followed will lead to the result.
- These rules are based on the total sum of the man's insight.
- Man then spends the rest of the time making changes to these rules to make up for unforeseen results.

A driver can skip the red light without hurting anybody, however, endangering the lives of pedestrians.

Traffic cameras are then introduced to catch offenders.

“This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shall meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success.

In Conclusion...

- You do not know law until you know the laws of God; every other thing is just rules and conjecture.
- How are laws and rules different?
- How are laws and rules the same?
- Why are laws unbreakable?
- Why are rules breakable?

Thanks!
